WEBINAR ON

The Geography of Unprecedented Debacles: Pandemics, Climate change and more

The COVID19 pandemic in recent times has exposed the fault lines in the global economic order. Though the onset of this pandemic is a relatively new phenomena, the global order has already been seriously disrupted by various other threats, the most critical being climate change. There has been a focus on recent times on the need of adaptation and mitigation techniques in regional planning as the climate change is expected to bring fluctuations in temperature, precipitation, flooding or storm surge. The world has recently witnessed a disaster like this when the city of Kolkata amid it's pandemic crisis had transformed into a complex disaster zone as the cyclone Amphan hit the city where the frontline victims were the urban poor living in densely populated clusters. This webinar focusses on this unprecedented debacle of twin crisis and intends to build
